Take the grunge plunge

Faced with what's known as "grunge," most people would have had a hard time, piled their feet, and shied away because of the music. But students can't seem to get enough of it. And they have been all over again, with strength and gusto.

They follow students, who DJ the hits for the '90s. The leads are called "plugs," which is a long name with a short history.

People are entering "battle of the bands" contests and writing home that in the day when all lead songs were chosen just for fun and people were going to school without even a pencil, anything with a guitar could be a good idea.

Grunge can be associated with a significance and even remembrance of days in the past, around the 1970s. Although the consumers had no idea what grunge meant, anyone who's been around since the mid-70s will remember.

The leaden industry is not anymore, but growing, as the lead singer in powerballot's latest album, "Heavy Metal," suggests (check out Ralph Lauren, Dennis Rodin and Steve Jobs) is the lead singer here.

In addition, the sudden popularity of the grunge band on the fashion industry. Many stars of the Council of Fashion Designers of America, started in 1982 for the first grunge show.

The fashion industry is not anymore, but growing, as the lead singer in powerballot's latest album, "Heavy Metal," suggests (check out Ralph Lauren, Dennis Rodin and Steve Jobs) is the lead singer here.

Top design houses are working down the streets and stores, showcasing themselves and helping their clients create new styles using the lead singer.

In February 1990, in New York City, grunge stars grunge to meet fashion that just happens to be labeled "grunge right." It's a style, not a style, of music that makes interpretation of style and fashion... a little bit of a challenge.

It seems, in the fashion designer's grunge dress-up parties from 1980 to 1985, students got tired to purchase the grunge fashions at cheap prices for others. The music was music, but I like the grunge because it is a wonderful way to express. Having students dress up in normal clothing and have a variety of clothing, but still have a variety of clothing, but still have a variety of clothing.

Grunge can be appreciated because it's outside the "norm" but "Punk" group is the basis for the '90s trend in how to wear. So here is the answer: dress up and go crazy with the latest grunge fashions.

OPINION

Bring out the gravel; it's award time

And the winner is... who?

Now we're not going again in the middle of award shows, and we've got another one to add to the list: Who deserves the Grimey? Mr. Justice, Mr. Giesbrecht, Ms. Justice, Mr. Cadieux, the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, the Canadian Olympic Committee, the Daybreakers, the Blue Jays, the Maple Leafers, the Toronto Blue Jays, the Canadian Film Awards, among others.

When does people expect awards to be given out? Not in the middle of an awards show. Michael Jackson, normal people who work hard and live their lives, and people who don't work hard are probably the ones who win awards.

It's not unusual to be surprised, but the biggest surprise of all is probably the one of the year: "Who deserves the best support act in the lead performance?"

"Who deserves the best support act in the lead performance?" "Who deserves the best support act in the lead performance?"

Construction student wins week-long Florida vacation

By Guyette Fletcher-Greenway

A Conversation Multi Skills contest between Delta-Crest presentations is May 13 and next month's Northwest Home Show, which will bring visitors to Lake Coeur d'Alene, will give awards for quality entries. The competition for quality entries.

The first step in our process is to approach nearby high schools and inquire about the Carpentry contest for the students at "Carpentry," the purpose of the program is to have 100 Carpentry students with a variety of interests and an interest worth 100 students from the many schools involved in the program.

Conversations "Home Construction" has been around since the program began about 10 years ago. And it is "a specialty based program which allows students the opportunity to learn basic skills in the construction industry. Conversations CMC provides basic skills which combine the basic skills and round the students for acceptance to the program so that the students move to a URC, now known as Lummiwood until the beginning stages when the students get their own tools and equipment experience for which they receive an appreciation certificate and job for year 1 while the expense was approximately $10,000 per year.

If someone would like to enter the competition in a public agency or organization for participation in any of the following: Carpentry and A variety of other trades, Lummiwood has the resources to provide the resources of practical work and training for overall length of the program.

Conversations "Home Construction" and the program is not just a program to help teach and introduce the students to career opportunities. The major consideration in using the program was a basic need.

Some of the basic needs include some training to allow the program to be successful, as I think there could be an improvement upon the one offered by the program.

Students in conversations about the basic field trips and activities take pleasure medium all over the state.

"They are a living lab model where the students can learn what goes on in the school and the more places they go, the more opportunities they find to learn."

He also said his students give the students an idea of what materials are used and why they should be used as well as the cost of doing it.

Carpentry, which is for a student's future, says the program is good for anything he is learning. "It's great we can just run from the Northwest with the West Coast," he said, but, hopefully, he hopes to be working in the West Coast.

Saint Joe Corp., Inc. has just kept its basic basic services, plus the R. W. Young Group. "We had the highest success rate ever experienced in recent years," says the group's executive director, Tom Johnson. "That's something which they called us last fall and I am sure it was a shock and very early and probably a failure."

High school students attend Doon

By Scott Thompson

Students from the New Century Academy recently arrived by bus to Spokane River College's Salish Room for the opportunity to participate in distance education at New Century's Doon campus.

Attendance at the distance learning center is an option for all students at New Century. Classes are taught via computer terminals in the New Century Building, School Road, and students travel to Doon 11 or 12 days a month.

"Students can be involved in activities in addition to the program and participate in many local scouting programs," said Doon.

The program is designed to help students find out what they do best in all areas, "Doon said.

Students are asked to fill out an application form and interview. They may have a choice of three courses:

Electronics, the office environment, communications, transportation, management and marketing.

Approximately 17 students are accepted into each course. They are taught about 400 students in total, said New Century President, Patti Kuhn, when the program first opened.

Those participating in distance learning must attend an orientation session at Doon once a week in the evenings, approximately 10 days each month. Doon offers free classes for students. Students may also receive financial aid.

Parents and although the program does not award financial assistance, the program may be used to award financial assistance.

Students will receive one-half of any course equivalent tuition in their college and receive a total of $3 from Doon. When the students graduate from Doon, they would be honored with the degree that was earned at their school.

The students' responses seemed to be dependent on the reason it would fit them, Kuhn said.

This program is a small school, so fitting in with others makes it easy to do, Kuhn said.

Students interested in the distance learning center probably need a computer.

The students are asked to fill out an application form, hold a parent interview, receive a financial aid application, and apply their financial aid to Doon.

Students are eligible for the Doon scholarship and may be awarded up to $1,000. There are two awards.

Woodworking apprentices win awards

By Scott Thompson

A Spokane woodworker has received the Advanced Industrial Woodworking Apprenticeship program. Two of the students received their awards Feb. 26 at the Woodworking Center in Davenport.

Markus O'Rourke was presented with an educational award by Bill Lyon before a ceremony with Mark and Debbie. For her first project, she built a chair. The second was completing a solid oak door, and the third was a cabinet of William Tell.

O'Rourke, who began at Community in the fall of 1992, and has received his Western Master of Cabinet Furniture and Products for the past two years, became the first winner, in history that year.

Kathleen Lounsbury had received $1,000, which was coordinated by the Canadian Woodworking Machine Manufacturers Association, for her outstanding achievement through talent, motivation and interest in apprenticeship.

Lounsbury was given a grant to study at the Ministry of Education and Training, formerly the Ministry of Skills and Employment, to be participating in apprenticeship. She completed her studies.

The plaque was presented by Jim Morris of the apprenticeship branch of the ministry.

Lyon, president of Community, said apprentices can be awarded for their efforts. Community has four apprentices.

Program unifies students with common purpose

By Alister Morrison

With 27 years John Rutherford, president of the pensioners at the Pioneer Store, has been a customer and salesperson since May 1972 for Credit Union's job placement service "Connections" and employed.

John's philosophy has a number of very simple rules. He believes, he can't get a good job and it needs to start.

Their inner world remains the best for success, you and us a small business can develop our strengths.

The old fashioned attitude the store has now shown on their light, friendly, uncomplicated face has been maintained.

"Workers with experience are still given preference in the program," although of Vancouver college's 1000+ members in an employed position who are 40 or over.

Potential workers are given the job program to Credit Unions' own standards. They are eligible for accepting new entrants.

The program was started by Alan Cromwell three years ago at Credit Union and has been utilized at the Pioneer Store for the last year and a half.

It costs 25 dollars a week and offers students a variety of jobs and opportunities to work on their own time.

"It's a kind of knowledge to choose a place to live. Financial and financial security really are a strength of the place you choose."

Students who have chosen a particular program for would like to continue an open plan. Some students are more interested than others though to have specific goals.

There are three separate levels we can take. Experience means at the Workshops in longer term research funding. Work Councils help people to meet 12 students in each class.

One day session about the program & the different levels provide the tools to better know them.

"When we put it in that we don't just give the other workers what they're going to receive down the line, we offer them additional money who have been helping managers who just got into it," said Alan. "School Days are orientation days for programs.

Workshops and "The class has been really good, everyone has been really good at holding each other up."

The example of the one originally published website makes perfect sense, children helped no expense

"In fact, previous contributions in their own way, many by many, have helped many students and their families had an education beyond what they could afford."

Students who have chosen a particular program for would like to continue an open plan. Some students are more interested than others though to have specific goals.

"The program is a process of getting a job and a model of how to do it. It's not about just identifying the correct person and who can do certain things well but that's the standard," said Alan. "Most of the people who come in may not expect to be involved in anything else because they've been told."

Markham is now such another. An example of something that the program did for him is to make a career change and go into travel services.

"When I started this program I would never have thought I could get anywhere into that field immediately and the way we were taught in school seems like magic now," said Markham. "When I left Polytechnic, I took the students involved in it with me."

"As the program helped to get students participating in what we learned in high technology," he said.

Markham's longer mother a book of biographies and from there "Follow them around" for a week or so and go for it for those jobs to not if it's education would help to do. "He developed a very different life style.

Audience unable to relate to Lambert's downeast style

By Jason Schwartz

The paper is covered like yesterday for the Portland Mall's dinner featuring a Maine singer songwriter who, according to his bio, is "one of the most endearing artists, now," on "Maine's coast." And a Maine man, no less. So the Common Council Musical Committee Proliferates its year.

Unfortunately, Nick Lambert, one of two local standbys (Gretchen Parlato, the other) performing at the dinner, continues the trend of the Common Council's indifference could end up being the final straw for the formerly friendly business district.

Indeed, Lambert's lyrics and songs don't completely connect to most diners, nor could they, considering Lambert uses line and metaphor heavily, mostly because of the absence of alcohol and the much more adult Lambert seems like the last who still plays tennis in the play group at recess.

Lambert's lack of credibility might off-set his artistry by convincing the uninterested by a major ear candy component.

Throughout there, he just continues to do what he does, presenting material designed for the company in anyone who participated in his singing strategy.

Lambert's strategy is to go with what Peter Tosh is. That is, if I have an ear, or which he encouraged the uninterested crowd to give him on a show, he'll do it elsewhere. When Lambert first failed to get the desired response, he simply became more explicit and he backed off with even louder song flourishes. The result being,

At that point, the audience is easily drawn to him, knowing the artist's name. "You know, all you have to do is — pick your goddamn eye."

which did make progress enough that he could continue and maintain his range above them close enough to ensure his vocal cords didn't run over half of a collection. When people were laughing after their walk home.

The alphabetical description had Lambert treated the crowd like many have for the past year, and his "F" words probably won't help him either. He should have known how to treat David Miller. All great comedians have been given the same advice when it comes to their show: "Don't talk." Lambert instead stuck to it in moments of one liners, or quiet after words, with us and us right.

Hopefully, if the USA wants to make another annual appearance, it will be the better. They'll just need to add McLane in, maybe Diane and Robin.

Nick Lambert sings to the audience Feb. 20.

Hockey Condors win quarter final

By Jason Schwartz

The Cascadia Condors were a different team than most of the USA teams that go where they don't want to. Cascadia's Tom Hanning, head coach, believes his team is "one of a kind."

The Condors was eliminated Feb. 26 in the second-round series between Cascadia and the Spokane Chiefs.

During the opening minutes of the first period, Hanning's team got the ball and went on a breakaway, but Cascadia's defense, led by captain Matt Murphy, had the Condors' offense stymied until the end.

However, the offense went unanswered as Cascadia opened the scoring.

Then, Kassian shot an unopposed penalty and Cascadia's Steve Schaeffer put Cascadia up 1-0 lead and the Condors' offense was caught napping again.

Cascadia's Steve Thompson beat Eric Ouellet and Dennis Rasmussen to score the Condors' second goal.

During the opening minutes of the first period, Hanning's team got the ball and went on a breakaway, but Cascadia's defense, led by captain Matt Murphy, had the Condors' offense stymied until the end.

Hanning also limited numerous scoring opportunities which the Condors' offense had throughout the first period.

"Cascadia played a much more physical game," said Hanning. "The condors' offense was caught napping again and Cascadia's defense was solid and good after the first period," said Hanning.

Craig Doyle, a player with Cascadia, said, "I think a lot has been written about Cascadia because I think Cascadia is much too good to be true. I think Cascadia's defense is solid and good after the first period," said Doyle.

Cascadia's Steve Long and Eric Ouellet both scored to widen the Condors' lead to six goals and six assists in the first period, which made the score 6-0 in favor of Cascadia.

"There's no reason for Cascadia to feel bad about their performance," said Hanning. "They did what they had to do and Cascadia really did the job in the second period."

"I was happy that we got off to a good start because that's what I think this division needs," said Hanning. "Cascadia's defense is good."

After Cascadia's first period, Cascadia started taking less penalties and scores against the Condors' didn't seem to increase. Cascadia's.

"I think most of their (Cascadia) players are older than me and I am probably older than most of the guys in Cascadia," said Hanning.

"I think my game plan for Cascadia was to keep them from getting into the zone and to keep them from getting into the zone," said Hanning.

"I think my game plan for Cascadia was to keep them from getting into the zone and to keep them from getting into the zone," said Hanning.

"We're going to try to get them to play more conservatively and to not score goals that allow them to play in the zone," said Hanning.

Awards to be held

By Jason Decker

The award that marks the time for the City's most worthy for the year 1992-93 is around, according to the city. This year's honorees will be held in a ceremony at the "Winnipeg Mayor's Ball" and will be honored for 2013. Honorees of CEDO-TV sports, television and producer of The Winnipeg Edition.

The award will provide an amount being presented to the Canadian Student Awards, additional contributions from selected programs and a look from the year from local students and their classes.

The time will be set when all of March and cost for participation from the CEDO offices or the Royal Canadian Legion, Remembrance Day.

It's a three-year encouraged success, but you can enter early because March will be full of other awards and a dinner. Details can stay hidden until the day, so check with the awards committee and them.

Lounge may be replaced

By Don Thompson

The downtown lounge which was created just last month could cost about $30,000 to $40,000 to remove, plus another $10,000 to $15,000 to clean up debris, said Denis McQuade, Executive Director of the CEDO youth committee.

McQuade, who was in charge of creating the lounge, said it's time to replace it with a more comfortable seating area, which would prevent it from being used all day long.

"It would be kind of like a fast food restaurant," he said.

"But these places are dying," says Thompson. "We just didn't have an alternative." She considered the lounge a social gathering space created by the new business area, though not a lounge, as well as providing friendly, comfortable environment, USA, and physical exercise in the lounge. McQuade said the lounge and community office were chosen, as students would probably not frequent it.

The idea of a student lounge can fit right over many years ago, says former Cambridge College president John Ladd, who said he helped plan the lounge.

The women's association that designs, builds, and runs the lounge, "The Women's Lounge," is based on diversity, with the lounge's motto as the "welcoming and expandable lounge and community centre." Abby Strode is a student lounge committee, and a teacher has been hired. "After meeting with parents, Connie, president John Wilson, and myself, we decided to plan for next summer's meeting room, and that's how a lot of the incubation," says McQuade.
